

The Past, Present and Future...

The Class 6 'Clan' Pacific locomotive was designed by Robert Riddles for the British Transport Executive and was part of the post-war modernisation plan for the newly formed British Railways. An initial order for 10 of these versatile locomotives was placed, all named after Scottish Clans and allocated to the Scottish Region. A further 15 were planned, but a break in production caused by a world steel shortage, and the move to dieselisation, led to the order being cancelled before they were completed.

No example of a Class 6 survived and the type became lost to Britain's railways...

Our aim is to fill this gap by building a brand new Class 6 locomotive, fit for the 21st Century!

72010

This Company was set up to build what would have been both the 11th Clan Class, and 1000th brand new BR Standard locomotive built, using the original design drawings. The locomotive will be the true next production locomotive, including the design improvements planned for the Lot 242 engines thus taking the name and number allocated to that engine: 72010 HENGIST, as scheduled in the 1954 Crewe Works itinerary. The improvements will make this a versatile, go anywhere, low maintenance, low running cost locomotive, fit for use on the 21st century railway. It will help to complete the story of the Standard Class Steam Locomotives.

The company, limited by guarantee, is a registered charity which owns the locomotive, and new members are always welcome.
